For I am a teacher: Let me give children the healing knowledge that there is a better way, a more beautiful way to live each day of their lives. A physician I am not, but healing is part of my profession.

Let me give some child hope for eternity, peace in this life, confidence in what will come. I am not a member of the clergy, but faith is part of my profession.

Let me give children a feeling of justice, a sensitivity for right and wrong; a love of truth and abhorrence of evil.

A legal advisor I am not, but justice is part of my profession.

Let me bring children relief from pain of disappointment and disillusionment; a remedy for dissolving personality; an escape from the ravages of self-pity; a psychologist I am not, but the healthy mind is part of my profession.

Let me give children a balance between an appreciation of their cultural heritage, and an enthusiastic participation in the human family, and anticipation for the world of tomorrow.
For I am a teacher. (Beth Nelson)
